Freedom Tower Taking Shape

STRONG START: Workers at Ground Zero install a 25-ton commemorative steel column for the new Freedom Tower on Tuesday, another milestone in prolonged efforts to build a new office tower to replace the World Trade Center. By next spring, builders say 27 jumbo steel columns — among the largest made in the world — will rise to street level, about 70 feet above the bottom of the site.

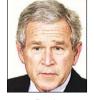

Bush to Expand Military

President says more troops are needed to fight terrorism

WASHINGTON | President Bush, working to recraft his strategy in Iraq, said Tuesday that he plans to increase the size of the U.S. military so it can fight a long-term war against

In an interview with The Washington Post, Bush said he has asked his new defense chief, Robert Gates, to report back to him with a plan to increase ground forces. The president did not say how many troops might be added, but said he agreed with officials in the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill that the current military is being stretched too thin to deal with demands of fighting terrorism.

"I'm inclined to believe that we do need to increase our troops - the Army, the Marines," Bush said in the Oval Office session.

Top generals have expressed concern that even temporarily shipping thousands of more troops would be largely ineffective in the absence of bold new political and economic steps. They also worry that it feeds a perception that the strife and chaos in Iraq is mainly a military problem; in their view it is largely political, fed by economic distress.

Bush said he has not yet made a decision about a new strategy for Iraq, which he is expected to announce next month. (AP)

MAKE-BELIEVE

No. You Can't Drive The Police Car to Jail

A 15-year-old Fern Park, Fla., boy was sentenced Monday to four years in a juvenile-treatment program after deputies stopped him while he was driving a stolen bus along a public transit route, picking up passengers and collecting fares. Ritchie Calvin Davis also lost his driving privileges for a year, though he doesn't have a driver's license. The sentence means he won't be able to drive for a year after getting a permit or license. Davis took the bus Oct. 28 from the Central Florida Fairgrounds in Orlando, where it was parked awaiting sale at an auction, a Seminole County sheriff's report said. (AP)

1 Man's Art Is Another Man's Killing Attempt

A man who tried to break into a meeting of Northern Ireland politicians with explosive devices is claiming the action was "performance art," the BBC reported. Michael Stone has been charged with trying to kill top officials Gerry Adams, Martin McGuinness and two security guards in November, but, his lawyer says, the explosives he had on him were inactive and couldn't hurt anyone. The incident led to the evacuation of the Parliament complex, "It was, in fact, a piece of performance art," said lawyer Arthur Harvey. (EXPRESS)

Like eating crabs? Well, this coconut crab at the Melbourne, Australia, aquarium may be wishing it had some melted butter to dip this person's meat in. The species has been known to feed on injured or unconscious people, but, instead, this Creepy Creatures exhibit had to settle for a coconut (aw. not again) for its Tuesday meal. The coconut crab — also known as the robber crab — is the largest crab in the world and climbs trees to harvest coconuts, using its huge nippers to crack open the fruit. (EXPRESS)

Cheney to Testify in CIA Leak Case

Vice president likely to be called as a defense witness in Libby trial

WASHINGTON | Vice President Dick Cheney will be called to testify on behalf of his former chief of staff in the CIA leak case, defense attorneys said Tuesday, ending months of speculation over what would be historic testimony.

"We're calling the vice president," attorney Ted Wells said in court. Wells represents defendant I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, who is charged with perjury and obstruction.

Sitting presidents, including Bill Clinton and Gerald Ford, have testified in criminal cases, but presidential historians said they knew of no vice president who has done so.

William Jeffress, another of Libby's attorneys, would not say whether Cheney is under a subpoena to testify. Issuing a court order to a sitting vice president could raise separation-ofpowers concerns, but Jeffress said it was not an issue.

Special Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald, who said last week he did not expect the White House to challenge his witnesses, said Tuesday he did not plan to call Cheney. Neither Jeffress nor Wells would say whether they expect Cheney to testify in the courtroom or offer about what he told reporters regarding former CIA operative Valerie Plame. Plame's identity was leaked to reporters around the time that her husband, former ambassador Joseph Wilson, publicly criticized the Bush administration's prewar intelligence on Iraq.

Libby says he was focused on more important issues — including terrorism, Iraq and nuclear proliferation — and didn't remember his conversations regarding Plame.

Cheney could bolster that argument by testifying about the many other larger issues Libby was responsible for.

During cross-examination, Fitzgerald likely will press Cheney to acknowledge that Plame was a key concern for him, and thus would have been important to Libby.

Laura Bush: Cancer Bout Was 'No Big Deal'

First lady says she had a skin tumor removed after Nov. elections

WASHINGTON | First lady Laura Bush said Tuesday she did not disclose she had a skin cancer tumor removed five weeks ago because, "It's no big deal and we knew it was no big deal at the time."

Mrs. Bush's comments, relayed by presidential spokesman Tony Snow, came a day after the White House belatedly acknowledged she had a squamous cell carcinoma, the second most common form of skin cancer, excised from her right shin a few days after the Nov. 7 election. The troublesome patch was about the size of a nickel, her spokeswoman said.

Unlike her husband, the first lady is not an elected official, Snow said. "She's got the same right to medical privacy that you do," he told reporters at a sometimes contentious briefing.

Mrs. Bush's problem was revealed only after the first lady's press secretary was asked Monday evening why Mrs. Bush was wearing a bandage on her leg at a Hanukkah ceremony. (AP)

A 'Reality Check' on Sex

Report finds that 90 percent of Americans had premarital sex

NEW YORK | More than nine out of 10 Americans, men and women alike, have had premarital sex, according to a new study. The high rates extend even to women born in the 1940s, challenging perceptions that people were more chaste in the past.

"This is reality-check research," said the study's author, Lawrence Finer. "Premarital sex is normal behavior for the vast majority of Americans, and has been for decades."

Finer is a research director at the Guttmacher Institute, a private New York-based think tank that studies sexual and reproductive issues and that disagrees with government-funded programs that rely primarily on abstinence-only teachings. The study, released Tuesday, appears in the new issue of Public Health Reports.

The study, examining how sexual behavior before marriage has changed over time, was based on interviews conducted with more than 38,000 people — about 33,000 of them women — in 1982, 1988, 1995 and 2002 for the federal National Survey of Family Growth. According to Finer's analysis, 99 percent of the respondents had had sex by age 44, and 95 percent had done so before marriage.

Even among a subgroup of those who abstained from sex until at least age 20, four-fifths had had premarital sex by age 44, the study found.

Finer said the likelihood of Americans having sex before marriage has remained stable since the 1950s, though people now wait longer to get married and thus are sexually active as singles for extensive periods.

The study found women virtually as likely as men to engage in premarital sex, even those born decades ago. Among women born between 1950 and 1978, at least 91 percent had had premarital sex by age 30, he said, while among those born in the 1940s, 88 percent had done so by age 44. DAVID CRARY (AP)

Search for Stranded Climbers Scaled Back

Sheriff: Photos found on body raise doubts about any survivors

HOOD RIVER, ORE. | Photos found with the body of a climber on Mount Hood showed supplies only for a quick climb, increasing worries about whether his two missing companions could survive more than a week in the brutal environment, authorities said Tuesday.

Hood River County Sheriff Joe Wampler said two airplanes were patrolling a small rugged section of the mountain, and he was preparing an avalanche search experts to probe the snow with long poles in hopes that the missing climbers may be hunkered down in a snow cave.

In what he said was his last news conference on the search, Wampler said that rescue teams had scaled back the ground search and are asking themselves whether they are "spinning their wheels" by continuing the search for Brian Hall and Jerry "Nikko" Cooke.

"The big search is over," he said.

Electrical Short Blamed for Mo. Fire That Killed 10

JEFFERSON CITY, MO. | Hours before a deadly fire at a group home, a maintenance man intentionally short-circuited some wiring to cut off power while he worked on the furnace, investigators said in a report.

The report by the state fire marshal's office did not pinpoint the cause of the Nov. 27 fire that killed 10 people at the home for the mentally ill and disabled. But it listed an electrical short or overload in "makeshift" wiring in the attic as a possible cause.

In the report, released under an open-records law request, investigators said they found no evidence of arson. (AP)

Libyan Court Upholds HIV Verdicts

6 health workers face death sentence for infecting 400 children

TRIPOLI, LIBYA | A court convicted five Bulgarian nurses and a Palestinian doctor Tuesday of deliberately infecting 400 children with HIV and sentenced them to death, despite scientific evidence the youngsters had the virus before the medical workers came to Libya.

The United States and Europe reacted with outrage to the verdict, which prolongs a case that has hurt Libya's ties to the West. The six co-defendants have already served seven years in jail.

The sentence brought cheers in Libya, where there is widespread public anger over the infections. The Libyan press has long depicted the medical workers as guilty.

But the ruling stunned the defendants. They were convicted and sentenced to death a year ago, but the Libyan Supreme Court ordered a retrial after an international outcry that the first trial was unfair. The case now returns to the Supreme Court for an automatic appeal.

The nurses and doctor have been in jail since 1999 on charges that they intentionally spread the HIV virus to more than 400 children at a hospital in Benghazi during what Libya claims was a botched experiment to find a cure for AIDS. Fifty of the children have died.

Bulgaria and European officials have blamed the infections on unhygienic practices at the hospital and accuse Libya of making the medical workers scapegoats. (AP) `SCARED TO DEATH': A Palestinian boy flees as an armed militant loyal to Hamas battles with the intelligence service in Gaza City.

Fighting Erupts Anew in Weary Gaza

Residents must run for cover as factional street battles resume

GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP | Students took cover in classrooms, motorists exchanged warnings about no-go zones and families fled beachside apartments as intensifying factional fighting brought life to a standstill in much of Gaza on Tuesday.

At least five people were killed and 18 wounded, including five school children hit in crossfire, in clashes that swept away the remains of a short-lived truce aimed at ending nine days of fighting.

Late Tuesday, Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas of Fatah announced a new truce deal that would take effect Tuesday night. "There will be a comprehensive cease-fire in Gaza to end all military demonstrations, all shooting will stop and random deployments [of armed men] will end," he said.

The street battles Tuesday sent Jamal Khalifa, 13, scrambling to take cover at a gas station in Gaza City's Sheik Radwan neighborhood. "We are scared to death," the shaken boy said. "There are gunmen shooting in all directions.."

Terrified residents were furious with both Fatah and Hamas.

"I blame both sides, because they are shedding Palestinian blood," said Mohammed Akkash, 47.

The fighting erupted last week, but intensified after Abbas announced Saturday that he was seeking new elections, a direct challenge to Hamas' control of the Cabinet and parliament. DIAA HADID (AP)

New Rules On Chinese Adoptions

Restrictions include limits on age, weight, U.S. agencies report

BEIJING | China is imposing new restrictions on foreign adoptions, barring applicants who are unmarried, obese, over 50 or who take antidepressants, according to U.S. adoption agencies.

The rules are meant to limit adoptions to "only the most qualified families," said the Web site of one agency, Harrah's Adoption International Mission in Spring, Texas.

The move comes amid a surge in foreign applications to adopt Chinese children. The U.S. is the No. 1 destination for children adopted abroad, but the number going to Europe and elsewhere is rising.

An employee of the government-run China Center of Adoption Affairs, the agency that oversees foreign adoptions, said it has issued new guidelines but refused to confirm the details released by the American agencies.

Among other rules, couples must have a Body Mass Index — a measure of obesity — of no more than 40 and be aged 30-50, with people up to age 55 considered for children with special needs, according to the agencies. JOE MCDONALD (AP)

Warning on Iran Issued by Annan

Outgoing U.N. chief says military action would be 'disastrous'

UNITED NATIONS | U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said Tuesday a negotiated settlement with Iran over its nuclear program should be sought, and he warned that military intervention would be "unwise and disastrous."

Annan, who steps down as U.N. chief Dec. 31, issued the warning as the Security Council debated a resolution that would impose sanctions on Tehran for refusing to suspend uranium enrichment. The U.S. is considering sending a second aircraft carrier to the Persian Gulf as a show of force against Iran.

He addressed concerns about a possible military operation in Iran at a farewell news conference in response to a question about how the Security Council should deal with crises after the Iraq war. The council refused to authorize a war against Saddam Hussein in 2003, and Annan called the U.N.'s failure to stop the conflict "the worst moment" of his 10 years as secre-

U.N. chief Kofi Annan gave his farewell news conference in New York Tuesday.

A senior U.S. defense official said the idea of building up U.S. Navy forces has been discussed for some time, and one proposal is to send a second aircraft carrier to the region. The official, speaking on condition of anonymity because the idea has not been approved, said it's unclear when a decision will be made.

Iran insists its nuclear program is aimed solely at the peaceful production of nuclear energy, but the Americans and Europeans suspect

QUITTING TIME: Only 4 percent of employers offer programs to help employees quit smoking, despite higher health costs for smokers and smoking breaks that could cost employers nine weeks of productivity a year, according to a study released Tuesday.

Wholesale Prices Rise in November

WASHINGTON | Wholesale prices surged in November by the largest amount in more than three decades, led by huge increases in the cost of gasoline and new cars and trucks.

The Labor Department reported Tuesday that wholesale prices jumped 2 percent last month, the biggest advance since a similar 2 percent increase in November 1974, back during a decade when repeated oil shocks sent inflation spiraling.

Analysts, however, dismissed the latest increase as a one-month aberration. They still believe the inflation threat that gripped the country earlier this year is beginning to ease.

"The headline number looks scary, but the reality is that inflation is moderating," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Economy.com.

In other economics news, the Commerce Department reported that housing construction rose by 6.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.588 million units.

However, as with the inflation report, analysts believe the data was not an indication that the slump in housing was coming to an end.

They noted that the rebound followed an even bigger 13.7 percent drop in October. Even with the November gain, housing construction was 25.5 percent below the level of a year ago. MARTIN CRUTSINGER (AP)

TV Worker Killed in Collision

Videographer for Va.'s WJLA-TV is struck while crossing a road

UPPER MARLBORO, MD. | A television cameraman was struck by a car and killed early Tuesday while returning to his vehicle after filming a fire at a shopping center.

Gordon Davis, 51, was the overnight videographer for WJLA-TV in Arlington, Va. His work often included covering fires, shootings and other emergencies that occurred overnight and in the pre-dawn hours.

Davis was struck about 2:40 a.m. while crossing Route 301 after he finished filming the blaze at a framing store, said Mark Brady, a county fire department spokesman.

Brady said the motorist who struck Davis stopped and alerted firefighters. Davis was taken to the hospital and pronounced dead.

There are no crosswalks or traffic signals in the area where the cameraman was struck.

Davis, who lived in Thurmont, is survived by his wife and 15-yearold daughter. (AP)

Classical Radio in Danger in District

D.C.'s lone station for the music genre may sell to Daniel Snyder

WASHINGTON | Classical music may soon disappear from the airwayes in the nation's capital.

The last radio station dedicated to classical music in the area may be sold to Redskins owner Daniel Snyder, who is expected to make it an outlet for sports programming.

Bonneville International is in talks to sell station WGMS-FM to his media group, Red Zebra Broadcasting, station officials said.

WGMS is one of the country's highest-ranked commercial stations for classical music, consistently rating among the top radio outlets in the regional market.

But the negotiations come amid a steep decline in classical music stations nationwide. The number of commercial stations in this category fell 30 percent to 28 last year from 40 in 1998, according to a September study by the National Endowment for the Arts. Public radio stations have been moving away from classical programming as well, in favor of news and talk programming that can build larger audiences.

The potential sale could leave one of the largest media markets with no classical music station at all. Brett zongker (AP)

Van Hollen to Lead Democrat Group

WASHINGTON | Maryland Rep. Chris Van Hollen, who was elected to Congress only four years ago, will lead House Democrats' fundraising and recruiting efforts heading into the 2008 election, Speaker-designate Nancy Pelosi announced Tuesday.

Van Hollen, 47, takes over the position of chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee from Rahm Emanuel. D-Ill., who was credited with leading the Democrats to victory in the midterm election and restoring the party to power in the House after 12 years in the minority.

Emanuel will be Democratic Caucus chairman when the new Congress convenes in January.

"Congressman Chris Van Hollen's depth of legislative experience and political savvy will make him an exceptional DCCC chairman," Pelosi, D-Calif., said.

Van Hollen said he worked closely with Emanuel on recruiting and as co-leader of a program to promote strong Democratic candidates.

He said his focus was "going to be on making sure that we continue to be in a position to carry out the mandate for a change." (AP)

The BMW is big and fast, with lots of room for lots of stuff — just like Americans like their cars. And, just like Americans are stereotyped, it's also irritatingly crude.

W Grace nder Fire

ROAD TEST | If you could get BMW's engineers and development specialists out of the office and into a hospitable Biergarten - and really, how hard could that be? — they'd tell you, after a few aquarium-size beers, that the X5 is not zee ideal zolution to the problem of a cargo-friendly all-wheeldrive vehicle, at least not one worthy of the BMW propeller.

The X5 program has been an effort of extreme equivocation, an attempt to reconcile the brand's top-predator handling and agility with demands in the American market for a tall, lank-legged trucklet. This tortured compromise is telegraphed in BMW's coinage of "sports activity vehicle," which sounds like the bus the marching band takes to the big game.

Nonetheless, the X5s rolled were a hit. But curiously so. Here was a vehicle with only fair offroad abilities and towing, cargo and seating capacities no better than a 5-series wagon. And no one would argue it wouldn't have performed better if it was a foot lower and a quarter-ton lighter.

"Ach!" the BMW chassis engineers would say despairingly, but

NFL's Best Come From Top Teams

Bears and Chargers receive 16 Pro Bowl selections combined

FOOTBALL | The San Diego Chargers and Chicago Bears lead the NFL in wins — and Pro Bowlers.

The Chargers placed nine players on the AFC squad Tuesday and the Bears had seven on the NFC team, which also includes a quarterback — Dallas' Tony Romo — who wasn't a starter when the season began.

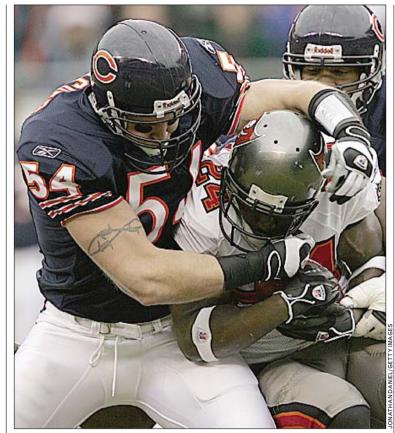

San Diego's contingent includes quarterback Philip Rivers, who sat on the bench for his first two seasons behind Drew Brees. The former Chargers QB signed as a free agent with New Orleans in the offseason and will start for the NFC.

Chicago's representatives demonstrate how the Bears won: with defense and special teams.

Three of the seven Bears, led by linebacker Brian Urlacher, are on defense and three are on special teams — kicker Robbie Gould, specialist Brendan Ayanbadejo and rookie return man Devin Hester, who has shattered records with six returns for touchdowns.

Center Olin Kreutz, a perennial at his position, is the only Bears Pro Bowler on offense.

The NFC team also includes the Barber twins — running back Tiki of the Giants and Ronde of Tampa more significance than in previous years," said Tiki Barber, who described himself as "emotional" and ecstatic."

The game will be played in Honolulu on Feb. 10.

Like Kreutz, Urlacher and the Barbers, many of the Pro Bowlers are perennials. One who isn't is Reggie Wayne of the Colts, one of the league's best receivers for the past few years but always in the shadow of Marvin Harrison and never before a Pro Bowler.

"I really didn't think he would make it, not that he didn't deserve it," Colts coach Tony Dungy said. "But it's a tough perception to overcome — that your No. 2 receiver is better than 28 other receivers in the league." DAVE GOLDBERG (AP)

Monday's Win Puts Colts on Track

Indianapolis is hoping victory will jump-start playoff-bound squad

FOOTBALL | Tony Dungy finally had reason to smile Tuesday.

The Indianapolis offense looked like its old self against Cincinnati, and the beleaguered defense played well enough to make at least some critics reconsider their harsh projections.

Now Dungy is challenging the team to perform that way more consistently.

"This will be a big week for us," Dungy said Tuesday. "We're going on the road now, and we've got to show we can play the same type of game on the road."

Dungy has spent the past month explaining the importance of getting hot in December, using Pittsburgh's Super Bowl run last year as the model.

Monday night's 34-16 victory might have given Indy the jump start it needed.

The four-time AFC South champs looked dreadful in two previous games, allowing nearly 600 yards rushing and scoring 34 total points against division rivals Tennessee and Jacksonville.

On Sunday, Indy visits Houston, a team they've beaten eight straight times, before finishing the season at home against Miami. Two wins would keep the Colts in prime playoff position. (AP)

Trade Sends Iverson to the Nuggets

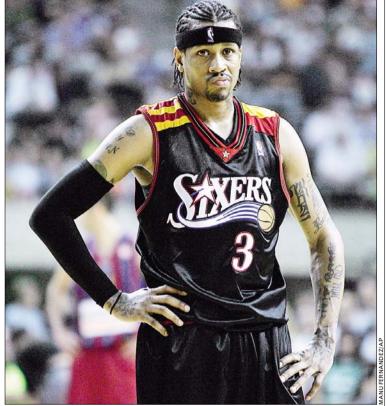

76ers get Miller, Smith and two first-round picks in '07 for the star

BASKETBALL | A day after losing one superstar for a month, the Denver Nuggets got an even bigger one — Allen Iverson.

The four-time scoring champion was traded Tuesday by the Philadelphia 76ers to the Nuggets for Andre Miller, Joe Smith and two 2007 first-round picks. The Nuggets also get Ivan McFarlin.

NBA scoring leader Carmelo Anthony was suspended for 15 games because of a weekend brawl between the Nuggets and New York Knicks. Iverson now takes his 31.2point scoring average to Denver and ends 10 turbulent seasons with the franchise that made him the No. 1 overall pick in 1996.

Nuggets vice president of player personnel Rex Chapman said Iverson and Anthony will "be a dynamic duo together. They are going to take this franchise to new heights."

Allen Iverson helped the 76ers go from perennial losers to title contenders, but now Philadelphia is trading him to the Nuggets for a chance to rebuild through the draft.

Iverson, a seven-time All-Star, transformed the 76ers from lottery losers to contenders, though he couldn't bring home an NBA title to this championship-starved city. He came close in 2001, when the 76ers lost to the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA finals. Since then the team has fallen from the elite, missing the playoffs twice in the last three seasons.

"We haven't won a championship, and I think we were a long way from winning a championship, even with Allen," Sixers chairman Ed Snider said. "It was time for us to take a deep breath and say we've got to move in a different direction. Allen wanted to move in a different direction."

Now the 31-year-old Iverson's chase for a coveted championship will continue in the Western Conference.

"I talked to Allen, and he's ecstatic," Chapman said. "We hope to have him here tomorrow. Allen has proven that he's a winner." DAN GELSTON (AP)

SKI ONLY: Three villages, including Grindelwald, form the heart of the Jungfrau region, smack in the center of Switzerland.

Alpine Classic

Set in the Swiss Alps. Wengen is one of the world's best ski towns

PLAY | Switzerland is known for its idyllic ski villages, with traditional wooden chalets nestled amid craggy peaks jutting up into a baby-blue sky.

Wengen stands out because of its location in the middle of three interconnected ski areas, each of which would be considered well above average on its own in North America. Wengen is a pedestriansonly village—no diesel fumes, no cars revving their engines, no parking lots the size of football fields—so people find it that much easier to decompress here.

And decompress they do: The ski holiday in Switzerland focuses as much on the idea of "holiday" as it does on "ski," and savoring a two-hour midday meal or hoisting a mug of frothy beer on a sundeck is more important than logging lots of mileage up and down the mountain.

Instead of cars, Wengen relies on an elaborate, efficient system of

To access the ski terrain — or local bars - all you have to do is walk (or ski) to the nearest train station.

trains, gondolas, cable cars, chairlifts and T-bars that could only be the work of Swiss engineers.

Across the Lauterbrunnen valley from Wengen is its smaller mirror image, Murren, which is similarly car-free and situated on top of a dramatic bluff. On the Wengen side, a cable car in town shoots up to the top of a peak, and skiers can cruise down 4,000 vertical feet on the other side to find themselves in yet another quintessential ski hub, Grindelwald.

The three villages form the heart of the Jungfrau region, smack in the center of Switzerland, just south of Interlaken and about three hours from Zurich. To access the Jungfrau's terrain—or any of the snowy landscape's restaurants, bars, cafes, and toboggan runs—all you have to do is roll out of your hotel and walk (or ski) to the nearest train stop. A ski pass covers all transportation within the Jungfrau region, and the trail maps come printed with train schedules.

There's hardly a bad room in town, but since most ski hotels in Switzerland include breakfast and dinner in their rates, it's essential to factor in the quality of the kitchen.

Each morning, skiers and boarders face a mountain range's worth of options: boarding the train and heading up above Murren to the Schilthorn, a 9,748-foot peak known for its revolving restaurant, steep slopes or taking the train in the opposite direction, up to the sunny Kleine Scheidegg area, where people toss back schnapps inside a giant tepee or soak up sun on the decks.

And when the light begins to fade, skiers snowplow back through outposts of hotels and outdoor bars, right into the heart of Wengen. BRAD TUTTLE (BUDGET TRAVEL MAGAZINE)

'PRISONER' ESCAPES: The 1960s sci-fi TV series "The Prisoner," starring Patrick McGoohan, is being remade by AMC, to debut in January 2008. The existential-themed show followed a man mysteriously trapped in a creepy placed called "The Village."

Punch-Drunk Rocky

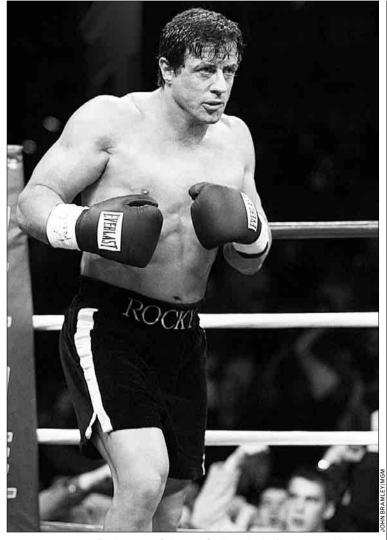

Sylvester Stallone enters the ring for one last weak swing

FILM | "Rocky Balboa," the sixth (and, hopefully, last) installment in the underdog saga of the Italian Stallion, straddles the line between nostalgia and self-parody and frequently teeters toward the latter.

Returning to his roots, Sylvester Stallone writes, directs and stars once again as the iconic title character, who long ago retired from boxing and now has carved out a quiet life as a South Philly celebrity and restaurant owner. He mourns the loss of his beloved Adrian, who died of cancer, and still hangs out with her loudmouth brother, Paulie (Burt Young).

But when an ESPN computer simulator pits him in his prime against the current heavyweight champion, Mason "The Line" Dixon (retired light heavyweight champ Antonio Tarver), Rocky gets the bug for that tried-and-true one last fight.

No one thinks he should do it — not his son, Robert Jr. (Milo Ventimiglia), who's bitter about the burden of having famous blood run through his veins, and not the media, who have a ball bashing Rocky before he even sets foot in the ring.

When the inevitable training montage begins, to the swelling strains of "Gonna Fly Now," it's all so hard to take seriously after all this time. He does everything you expect to see him do — he lifts hulking metal chains and kegs of beer, jabs and hooks those giant slabs of meat, before running triumphantly up the steps of the Philadelphia Museum of Art — and does it all with heart.

Lest we forget, as he prepares to get his butt beaten by a man half his age, we are repeatedly reminded of the comparative enormity of Rocky's heart. But was anyone (besides Stallone) really curious to see how Rocky might turn out at age 60? He is in fabulous shape — a specimen to behold at any age — and maybe that's the point after all.

Stallone says he wanted to close out the franchise with a sense of satisfaction after the bomb that was "Rocky V" in 1990. But maybe he also wanted to stand there covered in fake blood and sweat, wrapped in a silk robe, and revel in the warm glow of having an entire arena full of extras chant, "Rocky! Rocky!" one more time.

Back in 1976, it seemed inspiring; in 2006, though, "Rocky Balboa" feels like a shameless vanity project. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP)

EPIC MESS: Bernardo Bertolucci's "1900" looks great but is less filling.

Italian Anti-American?

Bernardo Bertolucci's flawed '1900' gets the deluxe DVD treatment

DVD | Watching Robert De Niro's new directorial "The Good Shepherd," one can't help but feel that De Niro was channeling those Italian-inflected, multigenerational dramas he appeared in during his acting youth: "The Godfather: Part II," "Once Upon a Time in America" and Bernardo Bertolucci's "1900."

the last of which just came out as a fatiguing director's cut.

Bertolucci conceived a scenario that would stretch from the death of Verdi in 1900 to the death of Mussolini in 1945. The United States did not exactly open up its loving arms to "1900," a resistance the director tries to explain away in the accompanying DVD interviews by saying it contained "too many red flags." He was referring to the plethora of communist banners that spring up in the film's second half, but it could not have escaped the notice of stateside filmgoers that the film's leading Fascisti were played by Americans. It is hard to watch "1900" without detecting a covert drop of anti-American venom.

It is also hard for us attention-challenged Yanks to take in this overextended five-hour, 15-minute version without multiple intermissions. But "1900" remains a wannabe masterpiece, more compelling for its aspirations than for what it achieves. Jan STU-

USE YOUR ILLUSION: Axl Rose posted a message on the Guns N' Roses Web site saying the interminably delayed "Chinese Democracy" CD will come out March 6. In related news, there's peace on Earth, pigs are flying and hell has frozen over.

The Griot's Footsteps

Toumani Diabate helps keep ancient African music traditions alive

STORYTELLER | On a moonlit African night in a leafy open-air bar in Bamako, Mali, kora virtuoso Toumani Diabate is peeling off an ethereal flood of kaleidoscopic riffs from a 21-string cow skin-covered harp like one his forefathers have played for more than 70 generations.

The crowd has come to pay homage to a man many regard as the greatest kora player on the planet. The music is East meets West, a 21st-century take on ancient Malian harmonies that smacks of flamenco. Far Eastern strings and the winding improvisations of free-form jazz.

For Diabate, the show is much more than just music: It's the preservation of culture and tradition, a way to keep alive the spirit of the defunct Mande empire that once stretched across West Africa.

Long before the region's history was recorded in books, it was told through Diabate's storyteller caste of griots. Seven centuries later, the songs are still sung over powerful rhythms and haunting pentatonic scales produced on traditional instruments like the banjo-esque ngoni, the wooden xylophone-like balafon, and by kora players from Guinea to Niger.

"If West Africa was a living being, the griot would be the blood,"

KORA KING? Yes, even if Diabate says he loves the Scorpions and AC/DC (really).

Toumani says. "As griots, we are the memory; we are the link between society and the past."

Born in Bamako in the mid-1960s — he doesn't know exactly when — Diabate began playing the kora at age 5.

Formally educated for only around 10 years, he was debilitated in his youth by a disease that shriveled his right leg and forces him to walk with a crutch. Yet, he went on to stardom, revered by listeners thousands of miles away and idolized at home.

Proud of his heritage, the Grammy-winning Diabate has funneled royalties into a guesthouse-rehearsal studio where local musicians and sometimes foreign visitors who trek to see him stay rent-free. He also teaches 40 young kora players at the Mali Conservatory of Music.

"I never want to live outside my country," he says. "I love my country and I love what I do." TODD PITMAN (AP)

Dr. Dre's 'Detox' CD Mystery

TOO MUCH CHRONIC? | The grainy 31-second video clip surfaced on YouTube recently and immediately sent shudders of excitement through the hip-hop universe: A release date for "Detox," Dr. Dre's eagerly anticipated follow-up to his classic 1999 album "The Chronic: 2001," finally has been announced for 2007.

"You see this man here?" asks Dre's rap protege, Bishop Lamont, a mix-tape veteran. In the clip, he's standing beside the uber-producer in front of a vast recording studio mixing board. "We gonna do shameless promotion. 'Detox.' September ... This is not make-believe," Lamont says. The two crack off-color jokes, and the camera pans across a room full of Dre's recording equipment.

Initially announced in 2002 and then tentatively scheduled for release two years later, "Detox" has become something of an urban music legend. In rap circles, its mystique parallels that of Brian Wilson's 37-years-in-the-making album "Smile": an impossibly ambitious, sonically groundbreaking labor of perfectionism so painstakingly crafted as to become almost impossible to finish.

"He's the king," producer Jonathan "J.R." Rotem said. "His attitude is: 'I don't need to put out an album for more respect. I don't need to put out an album for more money. I just want to do what I want to do, and I want it to be the most innovative thing.' The standard he set for himself is so high." CHRIS LEE (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

National Geographic investigates holiday traditions and treats

XMAS CHEER | "Christmas Out of the Box" (9 p.m., National Geographic) lends a scientific veneer to a whimsical exploration of Christmas fantasies. "Experts" ponder the power and thrust needed to send a big man in a sleigh on a global trek and the physiology of reindeer noses. Others speculate on the origins of the star of Bethlehem.

religious holiday into a $450 billion Christmas industrial complex.

Even national defense took a backseat for Christmas. For decades, North American Aerospace Defense Command (NORAD) — the folks responsible for detecting an incoming Soviet nuclear-missile attack — made it a custom to "track" Santa's flight with radar.

jections at the Mall

The Klinger spa in Dallas offers haircuts, massages and manicures along with cosmedical procedures. Botox starts at $400 for one area of the face, Restylane at $650.

Botox is the No. 1 minimally invasive cosmetic procedure, with 3.8 million treatments done last year, according to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons.

The International Medical Spa Association estimates that by the end of the year revenue from medical spas will exceed $1 billion, said Hannelore Leavy, founder and executive director of the group.

The Dallas location is an example of a concept Klinger plans to market to other medical spas and doctor's offices, said Klinger chairman and chief executive officer Richard Rakowski. For a licensing fee, the company plans to put the Klinger name on other spas.

Klinger has another such flagship clinic in Chevy Chase; it's overseen by doctors from Johns Hopkins Medical.

Skinovative USA, a Tempe, Ariz.based chain of medical spas that opened in 2001, does not demand that its medical directors be plastic surgeons or dermatologists.

Founder Vin Wells said the chain's directors are doctors or nurse practitioners who get training at corporate headquarters. Skinovative has four mall-based medical spas and is adding two more in the coming months, including one in the Houston Galleria.

Despite the accessibility of mall-based medical spas, those who run them say they screen patients to make sure that they understand the procedure and determine whether it's appropriate for them.

'We don't want impulse buyers. We take a careful history," said Dr. Jeff Kenkel, vice chairman of the department of plastic surgery at UT Southwestern, who oversees the NorthPark spa. "We want to make sure that that person is educated about what they're looking for." JAMIE STENGLE (AP)

Faking Sun in Sweden

Health

Swedish people go to extremes to fight seasonal depression

It doesn't take long for the strong lamps illuminating the white walls of the Iglo Light Cafe to have their desired effect on Carina Fabregat.

"Everything already feels so much easier here than it did outside," Fabregat says, gesturing toward the cold, dark streets hidden bevond the cafe's white window shades.

Like so many other Swedes, the 24-year-old is going to some length to escape the winter blues. That's what sets in when the sun disappears each day by 3 p.m., leaving Stockholm as dark and dreary as an Ingmar Bergman film.

A majority of Swedes feel gloomier in winter than in summer, and up to 3 percent have to seek professional treatment for so-called seasonal affective disorder (SAD), or winter depression, said Baba Pendse, a doctor at the Malmo University Hospital in southern Sweden.

"You sleep a little longer, you're more tired, and you get a stronger craving for sweets and candy." said Pendse, an expert on winter depression.

To counter that, the Iglo cafe is offering so-called light therapy, an idea normally seen in Nordic hospitals treating patients with SAD.

Dressed in white cloths draped over their regular clothing, Fabregat and other guests sit in an allwhite room to bask in the intense indirect light reflected from strong lamps off the ceiling.

The dress code at this Swedish cafe that fights SAD is swaths of white cloth.

Here are some other ways the sun-thirsty Swedes fight off the darkness:

Cruiseliner Birka Paradise, which

SAVED BY A SAINT

Every Dec. 13, Swedish classrooms, offices and city streets are lit up by young, beautiful women wearing white robes and a crown of candles in their hair.

More than a feast for the eve, the annual St. Lucia processions are one of Sweden's oldest attempts at spreading light in the heart of winter.

SET FIRE TO A GOAT

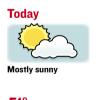

It may not be therapeutic, but it does provide one heck of a bonfire: For 40 years, vandals in the city of Gavle have made it a tradition to burn down the giant straw Christmas goat erected by merchants on a central square.

Since it was first put up in 1966, the 43-foot-tall goat has been torched 22 times — last year. by two culprits witnesses said were dressed up as Santa Claus and a gingerbread man.

THE COP-OUT

When all else fails, just leave. More than 1 million of Sweden's 9 million citizens escape the winter darkness every year by taking a vacation to a sunnier place. The most popular destination is the Canary Islands, followed by Thailand and South America. MATTIAS KAREN (AP)

Pining Away

Still haven't hauled out the holly? It's not too late to spruce up your place with some seasonal cheer. But don't stress about snagging a grand pine — just take the easy way out with one of these cones. They don't need to be decorated, but can perch on a mantel or sit in the middle of a dinner table and (the best part for procrastinators) they're the one thing that's already gone on sale. Crowded airports plus empty bellies minus the time to wait in fastfood lines equals holiday travel. Once you've boarded, pretzels and half-shots of soda do little to calm stomach turbulence. AMERICAN AIRLINES has upgraded its in-flight service. Starting Jan. 1, customers will be able to choose and purchase snacks in addition to the complimentary one. For flights two hours or longer, you can buy a bite and a container of water. If you're on a longer flight, you can purchase a light meal. Be prepared to shell out for your snack choices: Chips and M&M's are going for $3 each. The light meals will start at $5. With prices like these, we're thinking: "Skyway robbery!" We! Love! Cheap! Especially when it means we don't have to sacrifice quality. Let us now sing the praises of the new Hypershine Gloss from E.L.F. ($1, Target). Four quarters plus tax gets you a yummy-tasting, supershiny lip gloss in one of eight shades that lasts fairly well with minimal stickiness. We didn't like the applicator brush, which had a tendency to lose bristles that, consequently, stuck to lips, but the stuff is a DOLLAR. For that price, we can pick up the strays left behind. Reminders of Campaign '06

NEIGHBORHOODS | It's now been six weeks since Adrian Fenty coasted through the November general election and 14 weeks since the Sept. 12 primary. The 2006 District election season is over, aside from Fenty's Jan. 2 swearing-in festivities, but some candidates won't let their doomed electoral dreams die a dignified death.

According to the D.C. election code, candidates who still have campaign signs posted on public property such as telephone poles are violating regulations governing campaign signs. The D.C. Department of Public Works told Express that candidates had until 30 days after the Nov. 7 general election to clean up their signs. Obviously, the monthlong clean-up window has ended, so District officials could, in theory, penalize candidates $35 per sign.

On a Monday night walk through Cleveland Park and McLean Gardens in Upper Northwest, Express counted 11 signs for failed mayoral candidate Vincent Orange tacked up on Idaho Avenue NW; Lowell, Macomb and Newark streets NW; 33rd Place NW; and 34th and 39th streets NW.

But Orange isn't the only offending candidate.

Two signs for failed GOP Ward 3Council member candidate Theresa Conrov were up at Lowell and 36th streets NW. One sign for decimated Republican mayoral candidate

The devil is in the details. In the years since Arlington County adopted its official seal in 1983, minor elements in the seal's computer graphic file - like its color and detailing for Arlington House — have become corrupted. Officials are soliciting public comments on the seal's peculiarities in order to standardize its look.

Freedom Rock

Post music critic J. FREEDOM DU LAC was online Tuesday talking about annoying songs, Axl's long-lost new album and what to expect in 2007.

It's almost 2007. When will we no longer hear Three Doors Down? And, how did they last this long?

Could happen soon, but you're stuck with Hinder for a while, I'm afraid. And brace yourself, cuz Nickleback is tentatively scheduled to release a new album next year.

Most annoying song: It's a tie. "You're Beautiful" and "Bad Day." Amazingly, they were the No. 3 and No. I most downloaded songs from iTunes this year, respectively. Proof most people have no taste? You be the judge.

Daniel Powter's voice doesn't quite have the same nails-on-a-chalkboard quality that James Blunt's does. There's just something about Blunt's timbre that annoys the Boone out of me.

Do you think Axl is waiting for China to become a democracy before releasing his record?

Yes. Or, March 6 — whichever comes first. That's the date he announced on his Web site. Of course, he might not mean March 6, 2007.

How come the truly grating country Christmas songs get played relentlessly (Lee Ann Rimes, Faith Hill) and the cool rock ones are never heard anymore ("Run, Run Rudolph" by Chuck Berry, "Santa Claus is Comin' to Town" by Bruce Springsteen and ESB)? And the Wham! Christmas song deserves serious reconsideration as an '80s classic. Stop this madness, man.

Cuz the people in dentist office waiting rooms who listen to those all-seasonal formats prefer treacle, as it has a pre-numbing effect that makes the Novocaine go down easy? Just a guess.

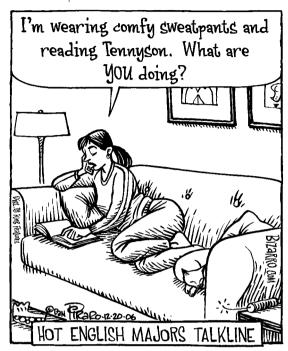

I may get killed here, but I submit that Prince and Eric Clapton are the two most overrated artists of our time. You. Can. Not. Be. Serious.

MAKE SURE THESE NEVER HAPPEN AGAIN. We all remember things that entire generations of people did/bought/wore that we're not proud of. But, like they say, those who do not remember history are doomed to repeat it. So we recommend some somber trips to the Bad Fad Museum (badfads.com).

Metro Deserves Our Support

I, FOR ONE, am appalled by the sense of entitlement many D.C.-area residents seem to have. Thanks to Metro, D.C. is a rare city in this country where going carless is a viable option. Would so many people rather watch Metro sink further into a deficit than have to pay a few extra dollars for a safe, clean, reliable system? I am confident that all this commotion will die down once the would-be boycotters spend a few mornings idling on some of the nation's most traffic-clogged roadways.

CUSTOMERS TOUCH

Take Metro to 'A Ghost Story of Christmas'

Join the historic Ford's Theatre for a magical retelling of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol: A Ghost Story of Christmas." This classic tale follows cold-hearted miser, Ebeneezer Scrooge, who despises the Christmas holiday, but a visit by spirits from the past, present and future force him to reevaluate his attitude and life. The production cleverly blends original elements of the story with the historical significance of Ford's Theatre, located at 511 10th Street NW. Performances run through Saturday, Dec. 30. For tickets and more details, visit fordstheatre.org.

Metrorail: Metro Center on the Red/ Blue/Orange lines (11th Street exit), Gallery Pl-Chinatown (9th and G Street exit) or Archives-Navy Mem'l-Penn Quarter on the Green/Yellow lines.

Metrobus: 42, 54, 66, 68, 80, D6, P6, S2 or S4.

Downtown Holiday Market

Browse hand-made gifts, jewelry, pottery, paintings and textiles from more than 40 local artisans at the downtown holiday market on F Street NW between 7th and 8th streets. Located on the sidewalk adjacent to the Smithsonian American Art Museum and National Portrait Gallery and across from the Verizon Center, the market is open from noon to 7 p.m. through Friday, Dec. 22, and also features live music and homemade treats. For more details, call 202-638-3232 or visit downtowndc.org.

Metrorail: Gallery Pl-Chinatown on the Red/Yellow/Green lines.

Metrobus: 42, 70, 71, 80, P6 or X2.

Largo Town Center

Not just a place for Redskins fans to go before or after the game, Largo Town Center is a shopping and entertainment destination. The Boulevard at the Capital Centre, located beside the Metro station, is a shopping hub with more than 70 stores and restaurants. Check off your holiday shopping list after visits to Borders Books & Music, Circuit City, Linens 'N Things and DSW Shoe Warehouse, to name a few. You can also check out a movie at Magic Johnson Theatres or grab a bite to eat at one of the many restaurants while you're there.

Metrorail: Largo Town Center on the Blue Line.

Metrobus: C21, C22, C26 or C29.
